

44% of people have experienced online harassment and 28% of them experienced harassment in the Virtual Workspace.

Harassment is more common on the internet than we think. Many are finding and starting new jobs completely virtually which has led to a lack of boundaries resulting in online abuse.

It's about time organisations stepped on the burner and educated their employees on virtual harassment.

By increasing the awareness on virtual harassment and informing people on redressal channels, organisations can ensure a better, safer and happier workspace for everyone.

GREEN DOT BYSTANDER INTERVENTION

A green dot is any choice, behavior, word or attitude that promotes safety for everyone and communicates utter intolerance towards any violence against an individual or community. It is an action that reduces the risk of violence in the moment, supports a survivor, or helps to create a culture that is intolerant of power-based harassment.

The power of Green Dot is simple: No one has to do everything, but everyone has to do something.

To know more about Green Dot Bystander Intervention, have a read of our e-book.

SEX PEST FROM OFFICE SAYS HELLO ON ZOOM

Viji Hari, POSH expert, and founder-CEO of CecureUs, a diversity and inclusion consulting firm, says WFH has hampered the work-life balance. “This means that employees are working late and receiving late-night meeting requests. This again is a form of harassment, as privacy and family time are not being valued,” she says.
